The majority of today's ITS projects rely heavily on a robust telecommunications infrastructure. These requirements tend to involve many diverse information, control and electronics technologies all communicating via data networks to back-end management applications. The resultant solution is a complex mix of mobile wireless platforms communicating to fixed wireless networks and onto a fiber optic or microwave wideband data transport network.

Intelect Corporation has the top to bottom experience from engineering, implementation, and maintaining these telecommunications systems. Whether it be a Land Mobile Radio network modified to support digital data and voice, a fiber optic or microwave backbone network, Intelect Corporation is your proven choice as a total system integrator.
